About the November 8, 2022 General Election

How the Statewide General Election Works in California

In this “general” election, voters will:

- Choose a Governor and other representatives for national, state, and local government.
- Decide if judges on the state’s Supreme Court should keep their positions.
- Vote “YES” or “NO” on 7 proposed state laws.

You will also be asked to decide on local candidates and possibly local ballot measures. What’s on your ballot depends on where you live. Every registered voter will get a Voter Information Guide in the mail that lists everything they can vote on.

For the following offices, only the two candidates who got the most votes in the June 2022 primary election will appear on your ballot. These two candidates could be from the same political party.

Offices that represent everyone in California (elected for a four-year term)

- Governor – The highest elected official in California: Oversees most state departments and agencies Prepares annual state budget. Approves or rejects new state laws.
- Lieutenant Governor – Next in line: Becomes Governor if the elected Governor leaves office. Has a tie-breaking vote in the State Senate. Serves on boards and commissions.
- Secretary of State – Head of elections and record keeping: Coordinates statewide elections and oversees election laws. Also keeps records about new corporations and businesses and other state databases.
- Controller – The state’s bookkeeper: Keeps track of how the state’s money is spent. Issues most checks from the state and manages collection of money due to the state. Reports on finances of state and local governments.
- Treasurer – The state’s banker: Manages the state’s investments and assets. Coordinates the sale of state bonds.
- Attorney General – The state’s top lawyer: Makes sure laws are enforced the same way across the state. Manages the state Department of Justice. Oversees sheriffs and district attorneys.
- Insurance Commissioner – Insurance overseer: Manages the state Department of Insurance. Enforces laws that insurance companies must follow.
- Superintendent of Public Instruction – Head of public schools: Manages the state Department of Education. Provides leadership and assistance to all public schools in California. Enforces education regulations.

Offices that represent you in national government

- U.S. Senator (6-Year term)
- Representative in U.S. Congress (2-Year term)

Offices that represent you in state government

- State Senator (4-Year term; even-numbered districts will be voted on in this election)
- State Assembly Member (2-Year term)
- State Board of Equalization (state tax commission; 4-Year term)

No Longer in Prison? Once you have been released from prison in California your right to vote is automatically restored – you just need to register to vote. You may vote while you are on parole, but cannot vote if you are currently serving a sentence in state or federal prison.

The state of California wants to make it easier to vote. Now, every registered voter in California will receive a ballot in the mail about a month before Election Day. You can choose to return the ballot by mail, drop it off, or instead vote in person. Read pages 7-8 for more details.

You do not have to vote on everything. Your vote still counts even if you choose to skip some things on your ballot.
State Propositions

Propositions are proposed laws presented to the public to vote on. Propositions can make new laws, change existing laws, and sometimes they change California’s Constitution. They can be placed on the ballot by people who collect enough voter signatures or by state lawmakers (the California Legislature). A proposition passes and becomes law if it receives more than 50 percent YES votes.

Propositions 1, and 26 through 30 are “initiatives.” For an initiative:
- A YES vote means that you support the way the proposition would change things.
- A NO vote means that you want to leave things the way they are now.

Proposition 31 is a “referendum,” which asks voters to decide on a law that was already passed. For a referendum:
- A YES vote means that you support the law and want to keep it.
- A NO vote means you do not want the law to go into effect.

There are 7 state propositions in this election. You do not have to vote on everything. Learn about propositions that are important to you and make your choice, YES or NO.

1 Reproductive Freedom

The way it is now: In California, the law says that you have the right to choose to have an abortion and you have the right to privacy about your personal reproductive decisions. But these rights are not specifically named in the California Constitution. The California Constitution is the state’s highest law. Only a new amendment can change it. A new amendment requires a two-thirds vote of the legislature and also a vote of the people.

What Prop 1 would do if it passes:
- Name reproductive freedom as a right in the California Constitution.
- A right to reproductive freedom means that the state cannot deny or interfere with someone’s right to choose an abortion, use or refuse birth control (contraceptives), and get other reproductive healthcare.

Effect on the state budget: Prop 1 would have no impact on the state budget other than the costs needed to place the measure on the ballot.

YES People for Prop 1 say:
- The California Constitution should protect reproductive rights so that they will not be at risk in the future.

NO People against Prop 1 say:
- Proposition 1 is an extreme, expensive, and pointless waste of tax money that will allow abortion at any time.
State Propositions

26 In-Person Sports Betting in Tribal Casinos

The way it is now: Tribal casinos in California can offer poker, bingo, and other games. But sports betting, roulette, and dice games are illegal in tribal casinos and everywhere else in California.

What Prop 26 would do if it passes:
- Legalize in-person sports betting, roulette, and dice games in tribal casinos.
- Legalize in-person sports betting at four horse racetracks.
- Allow private lawsuits against illegal gambling in some situations.

Effect on the state budget: Prop 26 could raise up to tens of millions of dollars each year in revenue from casinos, horse racetracks, and fines from lawsuits. Regulating in-person sports betting could reach the low tens of millions each year.

People for Prop 26 say:
- Prop 26 would allow California’s tribes to provide vital services like health care, housing, infrastructure, and education to tribal members.
- Taxing sports betting would increase the state’s revenue.

People against Prop 26 say:
- This measure would create a big increase in gambling that benefits only a few tribes.
- Gambling is addictive. Legalizing more types of gambling is bad for public health and safety.

27 Online Sports Betting

The way it is now: The United States Supreme Court has ruled that each state can decide whether to legalize sports betting. Sports betting is illegal everywhere in California, including on tribal lands.

What Prop 27 would do if it passes:
- Legalize online sports betting in California (not on tribal lands) for people 21 and over.
- Bets could only be placed through a gaming tribe or qualifying businesses.
- Most of the revenue from betting fees and taxes would address homelessness and the mental health needs of people who are homeless. The rest of the money would support Native American tribes.

Effect on the state budget: Legalizing online sports betting could raise up to the mid-hundreds of millions of dollars each year. Regulating online sports betting could cost up to the mid-tens of millions of dollars each year.

People for Prop 27 say:
- Regulating online sports betting would protect gamblers and end illegal online gambling operations.
- The measure would guarantee extra funding to address homelessness and mental health in California.

People against Prop 27 say:
- Large out-of-state gambling companies would profit off of Californians and block smaller operations from the market.
- Online sports betting makes gambling more accessible than ever, and more people would become addicted to gambling.
Kidney Dialysis Clinics Requirements

The way it is now: If a person’s kidneys stop working, they may need a treatment called dialysis. In California, licensed dialysis clinics usually provide dialysis. When a person is receiving dialysis, their personal doctor must visit them at least once a month. Most patients have dialysis treatment paid for by Medicare and Medi-Cal. Sometimes private insurance is used. Private insurance pays higher rates for treatment than Medicare and Medi-Cal. Infections that might be caused by dialysis must be reported to the federal government.

What Prop 29 would do if it passes:
- Clinics must have at least one doctor, nurse practitioner, or physician assistant present during all treatment hours.
- Clinics must report any dialysis-related infections to the state every three months.
- Clinics must disclose who owns the clinic to patients.
- Clinics need permission from the state before closing or reducing services.
- Clinics can’t refuse to treat patients based on how they are paying for their treatment.

Effect on the state budget: Increased kidney dialysis clinic requirements would cost the government in the low tens of millions of dollars each year.

Funding Arts and Music Education

The way it is now: Every year the state must set aside about 40 percent of its income (revenue) to fund public schools. But the state doesn’t have another annual source of funding for arts and music education in public schools.

What Prop 28 would do if it passes:
- The state must set aside some of its revenue to fund arts and music education in K-12 public schools.
- All schools would receive some funding for each student. Schools serving many low-income students would receive a bit more money. Funding would allow schools to hire new staff and pay for training and supplies.

Effect on the state budget: Arts and music education would cost approximately $1 billion each year.
State Propositions

30 Income Tax on Millionaires for Electric Cars

The way it is now: The state collects taxes on income made in California. In 2021, the state collected over $130 billion in income taxes. Most of this money goes into California’s main budget, which is called the General Fund. The money in the General Fund supports state services like public schools and healthcare.

What Prop 30 would do if it passes:
• For every dollar a person makes over $2 million an additional 1.75% tax will be charged.
• The money from this tax would be put into a special fund that is separate from the General Fund.
• Most of this money would be used to increase the use of “zero-emissions” electric vehicles, and to keep the air cleaner. The rest of this money would be used to manage wildfires.

Effect on the state budget: Prop 30 would raise between $3.5 and $5 billion each year.

31 Yes or No to Banning Flavored Tobacco Products

Background: The state passed a new law in 2020 banning the sale of flavored tobacco products when they are bought in-person at stores and vending machines. Examples of flavored tobacco products include candy-flavored e-cigarettes or menthol cigarettes. This new law has not gone into effect.

What Prop 31 would do if it passes:
• Ban the sale of flavored tobacco products and allow the state’s new law to go into effect.
• Flavored tobacco products would no longer be sold at gas stations, grocery stores, vending machines, and other places.

Effect on the state budget: This ban on flavored tobacco would cost tens of millions to around $100 million in lost tax revenue every year. Government health care savings from reduced tobacco usage is unknown, with possible increased costs over the long term as healthier people live longer.
